

Do I breathe or ferment

Divinity is Light Information that sifts through ignorance and transcends fear by simply Knowing that it is so. As the Divine, you are fearless sages..., like chamois and gazelles you skillfully leap over the traps of this world, which stands right on the ignorance of it. Experience tells us that it is not so easy to change a belief. It is somehow fused with the body, with its nervous system, that the belief, due to neglect, must perish and give way to new possibilities. The neural connections of the old belief must be dissolved and connected in a new way.

Humans are imbued with a weakness mentality so deep it seems to be written into our genes. The lifestyle we choose reveals this fear and emptiness in every detail. It is easy to convince ourselves that we are weak precisely because of the virtues that place us at the unsurpassed peak of organic Life, for which we are called Divine children. Emotions are said to be one of these 'weaknesses'. The inability to make decisions without regard for other people and nature is said to be a non-productive, non-profitable 'weakness', too.

With our way of life, we tell children that they are a mistake, so we put them in education so that they are properly adjusted. Surrounded by concrete, fences, security systems, locks, cash insurance, pills, pesticides, guns..., we tell them that they are victims of something over which they have no power and need a 'savior' offered as a thing to pay for. When you stealthily create enough detachment from the mentality of victimhood, your Divinity loses the invisibility of peripheral academic, religious musings and lands in the Focus of all Happening. It is enough to know about the Divinity that Lives you, to free yourself from dependence on external solutions and to live simply and devotedly like Cinderella, who has no resistance to the Happening, only humility and devotion of the Living. Cinderella doesn't know that by resisting she increases what she doesn't want, but by accepting it she nullifies it, because the attack has no resistance, so it falls into the void and annihilates itself. She is just pure in spirit and that is enough.

The last generation of the young grow up with technology, this is their normality. During walks in the forest, there are conversations about how efficient computers are and how fast the chip in the head gives results. It really looks like the efficiency and speed is a compelling argument to agree. But that's not the whole picture. The tacit thing they don't promote is that the chip will always be limited by the physicality it's made from, beside that you'll be dependent on outside delivery and design from here on.

The silicon atoms in the space allow only so much information and so much speed. When information encounters a material boundary, it cannot cross it. This is the upper limit or power capacity that the chip can handle. It may seem fast, but that is only because it is not placed next to natural processes that take place here and now, without space and time conditioning, or as they say, with the speed of thought.

If you look at the human neuron and ask yourself where it has a limit, you will find that it has none. It's more than fascinating, it's a breathtaking power, beauty and sacredness of Natural Technology that we shouldn't interfere with until we know what it really is. The moment a neuron reaches the capacity to store and translate information, it adapts, metamorphs to meet a higher demand. Endless times, when it reaches a limit and the information is too big for it, it expands. The chip atrophies, boycotts this neural flexibility.

Imagine the potential that we could harvest this and many other capabilities of biology, which, precisely because of the integrity of not mixing with synthetics, connects you to the Source. According to the momentarily Light Happening, you are continuously supplied with Divine information. What does this mean for your healing, intuitiveness, Knowingness, regeneration... on all levels? Each cell behaves as a conductor (transistor), as a resistor (resistor), as a storage device (consistor), as an information emitter (transmitter). Each cell is a photon generator, emitting Light and Light is Divine Information. It receives light from within from the Source in its own center and from without from all forms of organic Life or the so-called of the binding field, but not from inorganic ones that are not connected to the Source of Light. Every cell at every moment collects and uses Light to continuously maintain the body in the area of Divine information or field, which connects all organic cells into a single organism of light, the universe.

Block-chain technology has been around for quite some time, or technology that block the chain of events, which is the basis of another big scam, digital currencies. Where did AI get the idea for it? Blocked chain technology mimics the human gene in how it behaves when in contact with the Light. AI cannot recreate Natural Intelligence, but it can give the impression that it can. The information of block-chain technology is immutable... once it's in it, it's in it until the material decays like an immobile corpse. You can read it, but you can't change or forge it. It is this deadness of information that creates the impression of the 'power' of digital currencies. AI can only mechanically reproduce part of a natural process, it can capture information and manipulate it, but it cannot bring it into the flow of exchange with the environment, characteristic of the Natural Technology of Life, which is in considerate and symbiotic communication with everything.

Already in the first month of school, the niece told how cancer cells behaved, which they observed through a microscope during medical exercises. They are called selfish or egoistic cells and they really vividly depict the mentality behind blockchain technology, or its inventor AI and all its inventions, really. Just the name of one and the other, should scream to warn us to stay away from blockages and artificial things, and we go right into it. Healthy cells are beautiful to look at and breathe, thus remaining in Light Exchange, in symbiotic communication with the environment. When they reach the maximum size for the conditions in which they live, they stop reproducing in order to have enough space for the healthy functioning of themselves and the whole.

Cancer cells, on the other hand, are ugly to look at, do not breathe, live by of internal boiling or fermentation and are not related to the environment. They multiply without measure and without control, one over the other, until they destroy themselves and the host environment.

We stand at a point where we are invading the physicality of the universe, the physicality of humanity and all Life, with a non-life mentality. Technology, until it becomes a self-programmatic AI, is neither good nor bad, what matters is the way of thinking of the society that invents the technology. An observant eye will notice in the mechanical inventions we know this same trace of the spinning of energy within itself, which takes and takes without measure and without the possibility of self-stopping, even at the expense of destroying itself and the environment. Electricity, e.g. in the hands of an inanimate mind, it is harmful to organic life, it exhausts it to make devices, it pollutes with its action, it radiates harmful energy and by paying for it, it enslaves it. In the hands of the higher consciousness it is pure, natural, silent and free like the sun, wind and water. Every organism is electricity incarnate, and you are the heaviest lump of energy known to creation. One person can power a city of a million without wires, devices or paybills.>(* Each cell of the body generates 0.07 volts of electricity. The body has about 50 trillion cells and the product adds up to 3 trillion volts of electrical potential.)

We are this generation, the possibility of choice will not drag on indefinitely, which will influence the environment with its choice, but above all the Divinity, our spiritual essence, from which we intervene in the environment. Whether you choose breathing with the environment and flourishing or fermentation and decay, you write with the quality of energy you pour into this moment. Are you gathered in Life now from Peace and act creatively from It, or do you respond to the impulses of the environment, spin in reactionary accusations, bad mood and get lost in the timelines of non-existent time? Do you live the belief that you are the Source that conditions things or the belief that things condition you?

The more you are drawn to Peace, the more you yearn for the beneficence of nature and naturalness, the more you mature for a higher Living that creates in cooperation with Life and its nature, and the less receptive you are to the suggestion that mechanics and synthetics 'complement' you. The fewer voices in your head, the more you feel how cutting-edge NI technology you are.

During a visit to the Australian Aborigines, a shaman told a story that we will make devices for so long until we remember who we are. Our buried authenticity is eternally longing for connection with the Source of Love and Light, that unconsciously we have begun to build reminders outside to remind us of our lost connection to Oneness. We miss ourselves so much that we have built an artificial world so that the sight of it would remind us of our capabilities. Now the inanimate technology is no longer needed, and at the same time the fog of oblivion has been blown away, and it is easy to see what was obscured by it.
